

I have always derived great satisfaction from designing cards for special events.

Below — wedding invitation and announcement for my sister. The initials M & M for Mary and Mel provided the design idea.

Christmas party invitations for Eric Newell, President & CEO of Syncrude Canada Ltd.

Birth announcement cards are always a delight to design. These two are for Irene and John, the lovely children of Nan and Peter Poole of Banff.

Sometimes you get lucky when a name just happens to fit into a design — as in this case, when my daughter May married into the Tweddle family. Two different gold foils were used in the printing of the invitation card.

Alison Pidskalny of Weber Shandwick planned to get married in Jamaica. I thought the famous Jamaican rum label would capture the mood of the event.

Wedding invitation card for two ardent golfers, Claude and Linda Durand.

Invitation card for a party to welcome the new Millennium.

Tent card announcing a fund-raising dinner Art To Dine For in support of art and design students. Between courses of this gourmet extravaganza I provided entertainment by singing classical and Broadway selections.

A flurry of numbers was the theme of this Christmas card for accountant Frank Phillet.

Invitation card for Fine Art Program Graduates' Exhibition at Grant MacEwan College.

Harry Nickel loves the life of a cowboy and has a horse farm not far from the city, so on his wedding invitation I featured the Western way of tying the proverbial knot.

Logotype for application on T-shirts sold for the Rob Bell Memorial Tennis Tournament.

Michael Payne, marketing director of the International Olympic Committee and a former Olympic skier for Britain, married a woman from Spain. This is the announcement of the birth of their first child.

Right – Christmas card for Chieftain International Inc.
